International Journal of Dental Clinics- Stepping up

Dear Friends,

The International Journal of Dental Clinics is a relatively new journal dedicated to continued growth of dental profession through continuing dental education. The Journal publishes original research articles, review articles, invited papers, guest editorials and case reports covering all fields of dentistry.

The International Journal of Dental Clinics is an on-line manuscript submission, reviewing and editing system that has in just a short time since inception received a warm response from a large section of the international dental community. We are currently having a large number of manuscripts published for peer review.

The journal has been fortunate to have a mix of dedicated international specialist from all fields of dentistry in our editorial board and a large number of reviewers.

Our current goal is to facilitate a process by which articles published in the IJDC would be soon available in the databases of the National Library of Medicine and to achieve an appropriate impact factor for the IJDC. For this purpose, we will continue to improve the quality of the journal. We are also looking to improve our peer review process and update our on-line system to significantly reduce the turnaround time for submitted manuscripts.

I would like you all to help us improve the international standing of this journal by citing whenever possible articles published in this journal.

With Regards
